Your retirement number probably isn't your number

Most investors are chasing a figure they never actually calculated.

THE PROBLEM

You're carrying a borrowed number.

Most retirement targets aren't built — they're inherited from a headline, a rule of thumb, or someone else's plan.

THE REFRAME

It's an income problem, not a wealth target.

The number that matters is the income your portfolio needs to produce — worked backwards from there.

BUILD IT

Spend → gross up + inflate → divide by a safe draw.

That calculation is your base number — not a guess, a formula.

THE SUBTRACTION

Subtract super and existing equity.

What's left after those two is the real gap you're solving for.

THE TAKEAWAY

The gap is smaller than the number you inherited.

And far more specific — a number you can actually act on.
